This article is excerpted from Gold-Fever 40 - Years Digging Antelope - Valley History, one of the KAHS's books. It tells of the founding of the society.

Part II - 40 Years Digging - Antelope Valley History
by Glen Settle

Excerpts from pages 4-8:
In May 1959, the first official meeting of the Kern Antelope Historical Society was called to order by Glen Settle, acting as the first Chairman. The building also filled to capacity with many valley old-timers. The Settles had planned that the officers would be chosen from the old-timers but the old-timers had different ideas and they elected Glen Settle to be the first President, which he carried on for the first three years. (cont’d next page)
John Rickett and his wife, Nancy, had moved to Mojave by this time and became interested in the Antelope Valley history. John was elected Vice-President. His wife, Nancy became known as the "candy woman". The first field trip of the Kern Antelope Historical Society was to the top of Tropico Hill and Nancy, with her supply of rations, helped replenish the energy for some members so that they could reach the top.

When the Ricketts moved away, Orville Willman took over this chore. As on all field trips, Orville always comes up with extra rations to help members gain enough energy to take that last gasp step.

Florence O’Neil, who had been a secretary at Edward’s Air Force Base for many years, was well qualified to act as our new secretary. Her husband, Bill, who was Rosamond’s postmaster at that time, became the first treasurer. All these officers acted as directors but two additional directors were elected at that time. Emory Kidd, a pioneer Antelope Valley Cattleman, and Myrtle Gerblick Patterson. (Myrtle’s husband, Forest, was also a pioneer Antelope Valley cattleman.) Myrtle had come to Antelope Valley as a young girl with her family. They settled in what is now about the center of Willow Springs Race track. Her father worked in a mine there. Myrtle, as a girl, went to the old Willow Springs grammar school and grew up in Rosamond.

As you will probably note, many of these names are connected with mining. After all, the first meeting was at Miners Hall at the Tropico Gold Mine. The Kern Antelope Historical Society won out as the new name for the society. (This name was chosen as it covered the south east portion of Kern County as well as all of the Antelope Valley.)

Julie Winslow and Dorene Settle went to work and came up with an acceptable set of by-laws for this organization. Dorene’s uncle, Eric Burton, (who was a tax attorney in Whittier,) handled our incorporation papers, and we soon became a legal corporation – recorded in Sacramento.

The Charter membership closed at the end of the first year with 85 members. Within a short time the membership had doubled. Our membership included people from Bakersfield to Hollywood. And from White Oak Lodge to Randsburg and almost every other community in the Antelope Valley was represented on our roster.

One charter member, Evelyn Young, from Hollywood, was a free lance writer and one of her assignments was to write a story on Antelope Valley pioneer Rawley Duntley for the Desert Magazine located in Palm Desert. Evelyn was fascinated with Rawley’s early life as a cattleman and Mojave Desert Barbecue King. Rawley had learned from the Indians, who invited him to watch, to cook meat in an open pit. A Rawley Duntley BBQ started with a layer of charcoal on the bottom – a layer of heated rocks then the meat (wrapped in wet burlap bags) placed on top and covered with the removed soil for the night. The next day the pit would be uncovered and the meat very tender and tasty.

The Paul Deaver family from Mojave were very active in the first few years of Kern Antelope Historical Society. Marion (Deaver) was a reporter for the Bakersfield Californian representing the South Kern and Antelope Valley areas. Marion attended all meetings and all field trips and any other historical projects that came up would soon be read in the Bakersfield Californian.

It was decided the society should have a bulletin and it was put out on a ditto machine; a far cry from Leslie Harrington’s modern computer. The first bulletin had an interesting story by Clarence Gerblick titled “The Antelope Valley at the Turn of the Century”.

Warren Nunn, a professor at Antelope Valley College, was named the first editor of our bulletin. For the next several issues Kern Antelope Historical Society members wrote us interesting articles on Antelope Valley history or historic articles were used from other publications.
