March Meeting - Come join us Thursday, March 12th, at 5:30 pm at the Library, to hear Terry Gutierrez share about the Landsgaard family in Rosamond. The Landsgaards have been involved in the community for many years. Of course the kids attended Southern Kern Schools, participating in sports, band, etc.; the Landsgaards have had businesses such as Karl’s Hardware, real estate sales and legal services. And they have involved themselves in the community in other organizations and such. You have probably come across the Landsgaards somewhere in town - come out to learn more about their story.

The Kern Antelope Historical Society was saddened to hear that Clifford Greenleaf Burton, owner of Tropico Mine & Mill, passed away in early February of this year. The photo at right is Cliff speaking at the October, 2018 KAHS meeting. We feel privileged to have had him visit and share his unique story with us.

The following article is a reprint from the October, 2018 Antelope Horn about the Burton family and their involvement in the Antelope Valley in mining and community life. Reminder: original article was written in 1984 for AV Pioneers.

The Burton Family in Antelope Valley

In January 1900, William Morris Burton, his wife Millicent (Milly) Botwright Burton, and their children Sidney, H. Clifford, Cecil F. and Alec G. came to the Esperanza area (west of Lancaster) from South-End-On-Sea, England. Milly died the following December and is buried in the Lancaster Cemetery. William had purchased the Antelope Valley land from an ad he had seen in the English magazine, Field & Stream. The ad told of a land of paradise on the great California desert with its abundance of flowing artesian wells. There were many flowing wells, but the ad neglected to mention that the land was in the hard-pan-alkali belt and not too well suited for farming. William and the young men made a gallant effort to farm their new land, but without much success. William is credited as one of the first to use a gasoline engine to pump water from the underground valley water basin, and is said to have introduced Lucerne Grass (alfalfa) to Antelope Valley.

After Mrs. Burton passed away, William was kept busy with caring for the four young boys, seeing to it that they did their chores and getting them off for their schooling at the nearby Del Sur School. After a visit to England, William brought to Antelope Valley, a second wife, Maggie Grant, and a second family was started. They eventually had 8 children.

In time, William decided to move his growing family to Mission, B.C. Canada, but H. Clifford decided to stay and follow up on his new interest in life – gold mining. He had become interested in this new venture when he made a prospecting trip to Ballarat with an old desert prospector.

While in Ballarat, Cliff met another young man, Mel Sanford, and together they prospected and made their first “Strike. (The Gold Bug.) They were able to sell it to January Jones, a prominent mining man from Goldfield, Nevada. With his new capital, Cliff went to Los Angeles and studied assaying and facets of the mining profession.

Clifford returned to Antelope Valley about 1910 and started work at the Tropico Gold Mine, near Rosamond. The owners were impressed with Cliff’s knowledge and judgement and soon made him superintendent. The mine needed more ambitious young men and Cliff wrote for his brother, Cecil F. in Canada to come back to Antelope Valley and join him in his ventures. Besides their regular mining jobs, the brothers leased one of the back veins and soon struck a good lode of ore. They began to buy stock in Tropico.

World War I interrupted their plans for awhile and both brothers joined the U.S. Army Engineering Corp. and were sent to France. They returned to Antelope Valley as U.S. citizens. Eventually, after many years of hard work and good judgement, they became sole owners of what is now called Burton’s Tropico Gold Mines. They had started a “Custom” gold processing mill and eventually sent to Canada for their brother, Alec who later became mill foreman.

In June 1922, Alice E. Greenleaf (also see Covington-Dearborn Family) graduated from Antelope Union High School and in August H. Clifford took her for his bride. In December 1923, a daughter Dorene M. was born and in January 1925 a son, Clifford G. arrived.

In 1920 Cecil F married a young woman, Leona, that he met at San Jose while he was taking his Army training there. They had a daughter, Vivian in 1926.

Leona and Alice were of great help to their busy mining husbands. They worked at running the hoist, keeping books, selling dynamite and caps and many other chores on the surface, so that the men could do the underground and heavy work at the mine and mill. Times were tough for gold mining until the mid-thirty's.

Cliff became very active in the community life of the Valley and the Burton Brothers were credited with being one of the main sources of keeping Antelope Valley going during the depression years. They trained farmers (who could not sell their crops) how to become miners, and they gave jobs to many others in need, as they just couldn’t see people going hungry when the mine was beginning to prosper. They also helped the local school keep going by furnishing gasoline, bus maintenance and other supplies to the school system at no cost.

In 1948, during the California Centennial year, Clifford was featured in several magazine and newspaper articles as being one of California’s most successful miners. While Cecil’s family moved from the Valley when the mine was forced to close by order L-208 during World War II, the H. Clifford Burton family remained, although by then they had a home on Lido Isle at Newport Beach, where they lived a short while with H. Clifford commuting. The two children continued their education in California higher institutions of learning and returned to Antelope Valley upon graduations.

H. Clifford Burton passed away in 1949, two years after his brother Cecil F (Burton). H.C.B (H. Clifford Burton) had been attending an Antelope Valley High School Board meeting in Lancaster, of which he was an active member. Young Cliff G. took over the presidency of Burton Brothers’ Inc. Tropico Mines and their holdings and with the help of his sister Dorene and her husband, Glen A. Settle (who she married in 1948) kept the mine operating until 1956. Cliff G. and family left the Valley at that time, so he could follow his mining profession. He returns often and continues in the presidency of Burton Bros., Inc.

Dorene and Glen, along with George and Doreen Burton McNamee obtained a lease on the Tropico and opened the mine for tours so visitors could see a genuine historic gold mine and mill. Doreen McNamee was the daughter of William and Maggie Burton and though born in Canada, returned to Antelope Valley when quite young, married and lived at Tropico Mine until her death in 1982. Encouraged by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the mine gained international notice and for 20 years the Settle’s staged the World Championship Gold Panning Contest. From 1975 to 1979 the World Championship Chili Cook-off was held at Tropico with the Settle’s taking an active part.

Both the Settles have been very active in community life for many years. In 1959 they founded the Kern Antelope Historical Society, with Glen as its charter president. Now (1983) Dorene is president. Dorene was not only one of the presidents of the Lancaster Woman’s Club, but was charter president of the Rosamond Woman’s Club. Both have been awarded with many honors by County and State officials. In 1973 Dorene was listed in World Who’s Who of Women, a London, England publication.

Alec’s son, A. Cecil and his wife Dorothy live in the Rosamond area. His career centered at Edwards Air Force Base. In retirement he is busy working various mining claims, assaying and raising some stock.
New Scotland
(The following information is from an article by Norma Gurba in the Valley Press.)

The coming of the Southern Pacific Railroad brought on a booming period of land speculation in the Antelope Valley. Speculators in the 1880s advertised in England and many of the early settlers came from England and Scotland expecting an excellent climate for growing crops. (Remember the Burton family came in 1900 from an ad Mr. Burton saw in an English magazine.)

One early AV community was the settlement of New Scotland south of Willow Springs. The early settlers found artesian wells and began to farm potatoes, among other things. They even established a school for the children. A map of early pioneer colonies in the Antelope Valley shows this community as stretching along 90th St. West from, approximately, Rosamond Blvd. south to Ave. D. Eventually, many of the settlers in New Scotland were unsuccessful as they relied on farming techniques from their homeland, rather than learn how to get by in a totally different environment, and eventually the community was abandoned.

Gurba also shared a picture from In Love with Life in Lancaster, Hard Times (1927-1932) of the last standing structure at New Scotland, shown above, right. For years our family drove by this old stone building and now we know the story behind it. Ironically, my pictures were also taken in 1968 when my brothers and sister and I rode by and stopped to explore. The center picture shows the same end as seen in the photo (courtesy of Zella Scott). My brothers, Dwayne & Dale Webb, are looking out the window. The bottom picture is from the opposite end and my sister Judy Webb O’Loughlin, is looking out the doorway. Today, the pile of stone that remains barely shows above the brush surrounding the building.
Popcorn Lover’s Day

Date When Celebrated: Second Thursday in March

Many of us love popcorn. So it only makes sense that there should be a special day just for popcorn lovers.

Popcorn is good for you when eaten plain. It is not as healthy when it’s loaded with salt and butter. But all that butter and salt tastes so good.

This day is intended to enjoy popcorn and share it with others. Bring some to work or microwave some and put it in a basket on your desk.

You can have popcorn in the traditional way, with salt and butter. Or you can add any one of a number of flavors to it. Some popular flavors are cheddar cheese, parmesan garlic, and even hot pepper! There is no requirement as to what seasoning to use today, as long as you eat plenty of popcorn. Now that’s not hard to do, is it?

Popcorn Lover’s Day is the perfect day to make a big bowl of popcorn and cozy up to your cutie on the sofa, as you watch television or a movie on this special day.

The Kern Antelope Historical Society was established in 1959 for the purpose of learning and preserving the history of California, especially the Antelope Valley, which includes parts of Los Angeles and Kern counties. Speakers are invited to talk at our monthly meetings about aspects of our various cultures. Subjects range from Indians of the past to the Space Age. The Society offers field trips for members to significant locations in and around the valley throughout the year. Come join us to learn more about the wonders of this area we live in and also meet some new people.
